HAWAIIAN BIRDS AND THEIR HABITS

Rather more than twenty years ago there was published in the Hawaiian Annual a paper on the birds of these islands from the pen of S. B. Dole, the present governor. In the last Annual an article appeared written by H. W. Henshaw of Hilo, and this has now been completed and published separately as a book of nearly 150 pages. A comparison of the two works will at once show the great increase in our knowledge of the island birds that has been gained, since 1879. Though modestly designated as a "list" the new work is a complete, popular and at the same time scientific, account of all the birds at present known to inhabit these islands. It consists almost entirely of interesting readable matter, the actual descriptions of the various species, although quite sufficient for their identification, being usually limited to seven or eight lines or even less. Mr. Henshaw's work is divided into two parts. The first deals with questions of general interest to the ornithologist, such as the nature of the forests, the destruction that has taken and is taking place in these, the origin of the native birds, the causes of their decrease, an account of the work done by various collectors and the subjects.

The second part contains the brief technical descriptions referred to and likewise notes on the habits, songs, &c., of the various species. Many of these notes are the result of the author's field observations and contain much of interest. Thus of the "Omao" he says: "It is a common habit for it to alight on a limb lengthwise, a custom which with its erect attitude while perching strongly indicates thrust affinities."

To some species Mr. Henshaw has unquestionably paid more attention than any other observer, to the "Elepaio" of Hawaii and the "Io" for example. A few lines taken from the account of the former are a fair sample of the author's work: "The curiosity of the Elepaio is insatiable and a pair or two are always on hand to inspect an intruder and learn his business. It will follow and catch an insect on the wing, which it has chanced to dislodge from some hiding place, but it never sits and watches for flying insects as do the American flycatchers. In fact by far the greater part of its insect food is gleaned from the branches of trees and shrubs, and from among the lichens and tangled ferns. Its motions generally and its hunting habits are those of a wren rather than those of a flycatcher. Indeed its resemblance to the wren is remarkable, especially when it droops its wings by its sides and cocks its tail over its back, which is its frequent habit."

It is curious that the use of the distorted mandible of the Akepa should have escaped the notice of the writer, since it is obvious when the live bird is examined with field glasses or even sometimes with the naked eye, or from an examination of the food of the bird.

The economic value of some of the birds is alluded to and the need of legislation for their protection. As a matter of fact no forest bird should be killed under any pretext from the first of March till the middle of October, for not even for scientific purposes is it necessary to do so. It is a most unfortunate fact too that of the birds of the open country the golden plover both for food and sport surpasses all others, for it is of all the most helpful to the agriculturist, and its habit of selecting the most injurious insects, and its presence in the islands when these are most active might well afford it more protection.

At the end of the list the rice-bird, mynah and other introduced species are dealt with. For the camper out in the woods who wishes to know something of the birds around him, the present work is the very thing, while it is at the same time none the less interesting to the advanced student of ornithology. It should be in the possession of every bird who takes any interest in this subject.

MEMORIAL ADOPTED.
The Free Kindergarten and Children's Aid Association of Hawaii adopted at its October meeting the following memorial of the late Miss Mary Green, one of its most earnest supporters.

In the Providence of our Heavenly Father, our beloved sister and faithful coworker, Miss Mary Elizabeth Green, has been called home from the scenes of her labors among us. The Free Kindergarten and Children's Aid Association recalls with loving remembrance her earnest devotion to everything that pertained to its highest interest. She was ever ready to contribute liberally of her time and means and self to the physical, intellectual and spiritual betterment of others. Her love for the Hawaiian race, her self-sacrificing labors in their behalf, her steadfast desire to lighten the burdens of others, her sympathy and spirit of cooperation, have ever been a source of encouragement and inspiration, to all who have been privileged to work by her side.

Her pathway was illumined by a bright and loving disposition, which not only made cheerful her own life, but left a lasting impress upon all with whom she came in contact. The world is not only better but happier because of the life and influence of Mary Green.

We shall miss our friend and sister from the various places where we have been accustomed to meet her, but we shall cherish her memory with the deepest respect and affection. Let us be glad in our sorrow that we have had the privilege of knowing and of being associated with such a noble and Christ-like worker. To her sister and other relations we tender our heartfelt sympathy in this, their great loss, believing that their consolation will be in the assurance that to her "to die was gain."

MAN'S NATURAL GOD-GIVEN FOOD

VEGETARIANISM AS EXPLAINED,
BELIEVED AND PRACTICED BY SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS.

EDITOR STAR: Responding to your invitation to explain the views held in regard to food, particularly with regard to "Vegetarianism," by the members of the religious body known as Seventh Day Adventists, let me say at the outset that it seems to us a great deal of misapprehension is entertained by many as to what constitutes true "Vegetarianism."

Briefly defined, it signifies the non-use of animal foods; it also embraces the non-use of stimulants, narcotics, condiments and spices. The true idea of vegetarianism, incorporated in the bill of fare, the proper combinations of fruit, grain, vegetables and nuts; the original diet prescribed by a wise Creator, for man and beast, as found in his own account of creation.

Before sin entered the world, all were vegetarians, in harmony with God's plan, and the result of eating the original diet was seen in the long-lived giants and mastodons who lived in that age; even after they were brought under the dominion of sin. But with sin came a thirst for flesh, and God gave permission to eat flesh, but stated plainly in that He would "require the blood of their lives, at the hand of every beast." And immediately man began to deteriorate in age and stature until from giants and centenarians, we are reduced to dwarfs and children, the average of life being a little more than thirty years at the present time. The children of Israel lusted for flesh in the wilderness when God had provided "Manna," or "Angels food" for them which he called the "Bread of the Mighty," or "Corn of Heaven," and the Psalmist states "that there was not one feeble person among their tribes," but with departure from this law they soon forgot His works, and lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and it was then, their request, but sent leanness into their souls.

So much then for the foundation upon which true vegetarianism rests. Now as to the physiological side of the question. The people are becoming aroused on this important subject, and more especially in recent years since the scientific physicians have discovered the evils resulting from a meat diet. Especially in a warm climate like this, meats kept in cold storage, set up a decomposition almost as soon as exposed to the air, and since it has been discovered that many of the animals slaughtered for market are diseased, one can see readily that even under the most favorable conditions, flesh is a poor substitute for food.

Examinations of dairy cattle reveals the fact that a large per cent are infected with tuberculosis, which is conveyed to the milk and butter by a germ, which contributes largely toward the spread of consumption. Physicians are becoming alarmed at the rapid increase of cancer of the stomach, a disease almost incurable, and in a great many cases is traced to the use of diseased meats. The free use of fat meats often produces scurvy and many skin and blood maladies.

One should endeavor to subsist so far as possible upon the native vegetables and fruits, taking care to recognize proper combinations. Fruit and vegetables should not be taken at the same meal. Grains and fruit combine well. Examine the vegetables. Tomatoes may be eaten with either fruit or vegetables, at the same meal. For breakfast thoroughly cooked bread, with steamed rice or other grains, with mild fruit, also nut preparations, "Bromose," "Nutoline" or some other of the many nut foods, "Granose" or "Wheat Flakes" are also very palatable as well as nourishing. If one feels the need of drink, a cup of "Carnegie" coffee will be found very palatable and will out the after effects of coffee; however, the less one drinks at meals the better, as it dilutes the digestive fluids, thus impeding digestion, causing fermentation or sour stomach.

The midday meal should be the hearty meal of the day, in order that digestion may take place before retiring. It should consist of vegetables, grains and nuts (no fruit). The evening meal should be light, consisting largely of ripe fruit, and the more easily digested grains and nuts. These are only suggestions, but the principles set forth are now recognized by the leading physicians as being exceedingly important, especially in warm countries.
